Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The claims contain many areas that lack clarity. It is also unclear what many of the claimed components mean to render the claims understandable.

For example in claim 1, line 3 a first face has never been claimed to give a reference for an "opposite face". Also in claim 1, line 6, it is unclear what is meant by a "thin active circuit" and how said circuit can have mechanical flexibility. Further what is the difference between the "thin active circuit and the active circuit" claims 1, line 7, brings in another "face" which renders confusion with the other faces recited. Further what is meant by a "final support" when no referenced first support has been recited.

Similar indefiniteness applies to the device claims and further in claim 12 line 4, "the support" has no antecedent as well as "one element" in line 6.

These are only a few of many examples of areas that lack clarity. It is suggested that the claims are carefully reviewed and clarified to facilitate understanding the invention.

Claims 1-18 are rejected.

Kayanakis et al and Cung are cited to show card means with antennas.
